

American Neuropsychiatric Association

The American Neuropsychiatric Association (ANPA), established in 1988, is an organization of professionals in neuropsychiatry, behavioral neurology, neuropsychology and the clinical neurosciences. Our mission is to improve the lives of people with disorders at the interface of psychiatry and neurology.

The strength of the organization is our diversity of membership, which is comprised of professionals all areas of neuroscience who share clinical and/or academic interests in neuropsychiatry. The interdisciplinary nature of the membership encourages collaboration among educators, clinicians, researchers, students and trainees in research presentations, symposia, workshops and/or continuing education courses. The Journal of Neuropsychiatry and Clinical Neurosciences (JNCN) is the official publication of the organization, and is a benefit of membership.

ANPA holds an annual scientific meeting and provides up to 30 CME/CE credits. Members are encouraged to submit their work for presentation at these annual meetings. Travel awards are available for promising young investigators. Annual meeting abstracts and proceedings are published in JNCN.
