American Neuropsychiatric Association

The American Neuropsychiatric Association (ANPA), established in 1988, is an organization of professionals in neuropsychiatry, behavioral neurology, neuropsychology and the clinical neurosciences. Our mission is to improve the lives of people with disorders at the interface of psychiatry and neurology.

One strength of our organization is our diverse membership, which is comprised of professionals in all areas of neuroscience who share clinical and/or academic interests in neuropsychiatry. The interdisciplinary makeup of the membership encourages collaboration among educators, clinicians, researchers, students and trainees during research presentations, symposia, workshops, and continuing education courses. The Journal of Neuropsychiatry and Clinical Neurosciences (JNCN) is the official publication of the organization, and a subscription is a benefit of membership.

ANPA holds an annual scientific meeting that provides the opportunity for attendees to earn continuing education and maintenance of certification credits.
